A 'Sesame Street' For Grown Ups?

"Oh, Sesame, may your kind increase" was our concluding statement of hope over a year ago when "Sesame Street," the Children's Television Workshop production, was assured a second annual lease on educational life.

Success and popular appeal of the hour-long weekday programs, which are broadcast on many educational TV stations across the nation, have now prompted the U.S. Office of Education to ask CTW to assist in developing adult instructional programs.

Education Commissioner Sidney P. Marland Jr. says efforts will be made to extend the workshop's experience and talents into "areas such as the Right to Read, career education and environmental education."

Just how much adult viewing interest can be generated by such fields is difficult to speculate about, but experimentation should provide some answers. Instructional materials and timing, for one thing, could be correlated with new or existing adult educational courses.

This much seems certain. The $8-million spent in a year by CTW to entertain and trap many young minds into learning - at least five to six million preschoolers was the first-year estimate - is a tremendously efficient investment.

The taxpaying public should have great interest in seeing whether the creators of Sesame Street can meet the challenge of adult educational TV programming as successfully as they have with the tikes. - New Orleans (La.) Times-Picayune

Aimless Walking

The city council of Dallas recently passed an ordinance forbidding, and providing penalties for: "Walking about aimlessly, without apparent purpose, lingering, hanging around, lagging behind, idly spending time, delaying, sauntering and moving slowly about, where such conduct is not due to physical defect or condition."

This legislative landmark is intended, no doubt, to hamper and harass the hapless hippie, whose shiftless ways seem forever capable of arousing the ire and eloquence of our lawmakers. Perhaps it will work, especially in the cold and wet times of the year. But it could be hard, come spring, on teenage lovers, or small boys on their way to school, or old boys on their way to work who are neither hippies nor young lovers nor small boys, but who, suddenly and without warning, are struck by a passing breeze on the busy street, and pause a moment, and remember. - Louisville (Ky.) Pollution Fight Asks More Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential advisory committee, calling air pollution "our most immediate health hazard," says environmental programs deserve a bigger cut of the federal budget.

The Citizens' Advisory Committee on Environmental Quality, in a report to President Nixon Tuesday, also said the government should raise its sights on water quality and trash accumulations.

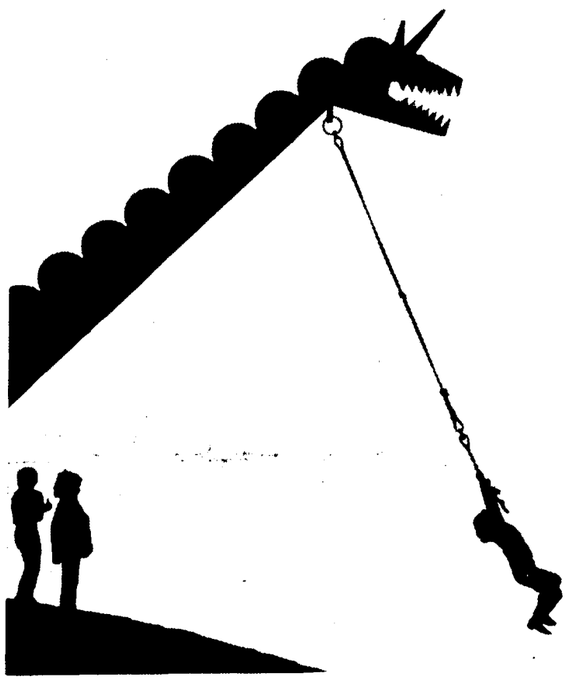

It said the attack on air pollution should include "a compulsory but phased program" of fitting old cars with antipollution devices over the next few years. Federal regulations require new cars to meet strict emission standards by 1975.

The committee said administration efforts to increase water pollution control funding was a step in the right direction but more steps were needed.

The administration has proposed increasing the federal grant for water treatment facilities to provide the matching half of a $12 billion national investment over three years.

SOUTH RISES AGAIN very far south—in Australia. Relics of America's Civil War surround Adrian L. Pearce, 30, of Sydney, president of the Australian branch of the Confederate Historical Society. The group is small, about 15 members, but intense in its interest in the century-old conflict.

DRAGON SWING is popular with the younger set in Omaha, Neb. The model of a Viking ship, called Fafnir, is also a teaching device at a school.

Mills 'Not a Declared Seeker of Presidency' But Many Work at It

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Wilbur D. Mills says he's not making himself a candidate for the White House, but "I've never objected to anything my friends do." As, for example, making him a candidate for the White House.

That's a tack taken with some routine lately as the Arkansas Democrat tours a Southern circuit and bolsters acquaintances in states which, by no likely coincidence, have presidential primaries next year.

In Nashville, Tenn. last weekend, for example, he stood with Democratic Reps. Richard Fulton, William R. Anderson and Ray Blanton and reminded newsmen "I have said I do not want my name on the ballot."

"However," he smiled, "I'm in the hands of my friends."

And he acknowledged—or suggested—to fellow Democrats in Raleigh, N.C., Thursday that "there might be some states where my friends might prevail upon me," to allow his name entered.

Mills, who will be 62 next week, heads Saturday for Florida, site of another primary, and a testimonial dinner for Rep. Bill Chappell, another admirer.

Admirers are something of which Mills has plenty, particularly among colleagues who agree with the moderate-to-conservative fiscal philosophy which has marked his 32-year House career and led him to the chairmanship of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee. But whether most would agree with Rep. Walter R. Jones, D-N.C., that Mills' "stable and unemotional leadership" will make him a serious presidential contender is another matter.

One congressman, who asked not to be identified, said Mills will find of his strength limited to the South and border states.

"A lot of his support will be from people who voted for George Wallace in '68," he said, although quickly adding "Wilbur doesn't share Wallace's views or race.'

And there is little evidence the other possible Democratic candidates are worried over Mills.

In North Carolina, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine already has the support of Gov. Bob Scott and State Democratic Committee Chairman W. Eugene Simmons. They endorsed Muskie several months ago.

But Reps, Jones, David N. Henderson and Alton B. Lennon, all D-N.C., say Mills can win in the state if Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., or some other local luminary doesn't run as a favorite son.

Urges Voter Drive for 18ers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Bill Alexander, D - Ark., has asked the Arkansas Association of County Judges to formulate a voter registration drive for 18 year olds who will become eligible to vote under the constitutional amendment now before the states.

"Being convinced of their qualifications," Alexander said in a letter to Judge Alfred Stinnett of Ouachita County, association president, "I would urge you to formulate a registration drive which would expedite the registration of those eligible citizens."

Quick Ban on Strip Mines Opposed

By JANET STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sudden ban on strip mining would be a disastrous drain on the nation's energy sources, Elburt F. Osborn, director of the U.S. Bureau of Mines, said today.

Osborn, in prepared testimony before a House Appropriations subcommittee, said that if stripping were phased out over "say five years" the energy gap might be filled through secondary recover of oil, or by other means.

But, he said, oil most likely would have to be imported to take some of the pressure off already-hard-pressed domestic energy sources.

Rep. Ken Hechler, D-W.Va., has introduced a bill to ban coal strip mining nationwide six months after enactment.

If the Hechler bill is passed, Osborn declared, about 20,000 miners, almost all in the Appalachian region, will be put to work immediately.

Osborn said there also would be a large-scale return to deep-shaft mining because of the need for coal in the United States.

"It would have a great deal of impact upon our ability to meet our energy needs. I doubt very much if we could in a very short period of time crank up enough people to operate underground to compensate for the loss of coal from strip mining," he said.

Thirty-five per cent of the nation's coal supply is furnished from strip mines, he said, adding an ever-increasing amount will be stripped from Western states because they are more adaptable to that kind of mining than the East.

Consequently, he said, "the bulk of coal production in the West would come to a screaming halt" under the Hechler bill.

Some coal deposits—128 billion tons—are too close to the surface for safe underground mining due to roof-support and water problems, so the coal there must be stripped out, the bureau said.

Osborn said other domestic coal would compensate for some loss of stripped coal but more foreign oil probably would have to be shipped here if Congress bans strip mining nationally.

Osborn said the United States consumes about 15 million barrels of oil daily, including 11 million barrels produced domestically.

Hollis M. Dole, assistant bureau secretary for mineral resources, said it is impossible to count on technology to get all the oil out of domestic deposits as a means to increasing the nation's production.

Republicans Ready for New Drive

By GREGG HERRINGTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Convinced Republicans can win a whole new constituency from Democrats in 1972, nearly 200 ethnic Americans are meeting here this weekend to put a new wrinkle in the GOP's national structure.

Stressing anticommunism, law-and-order and a disciplined social and economic order, Republican officials say they intend to court the tens of millions of Itlian, German, East European and other hyphenated-Americans whose heritage and cultural ties give them an identity of their own.

"By and large, ethnic Americans believe in the same principles the President does," GOP National Chairman Robert Dole said in an interview Friday. "They are particularly concerned about a strong national defense. They know what happens under Communism."

The Kansas senator said ethnic Americans "are increasingly leery of some leaders of the Democratic party who have traded their birthright of freedom for a mess of New Left political pottage."

Representing 35 nationality groups from 27 states, the ethnic Republicans are setting up the GOP National Committee's first Nationalities Council as a permanent division of the committee.

Previously, explained Laszlo Pasztor, GOP heritage groups director, ethnic groups were organized by the party only at election time.

The 49-year-old Czechoslovakian who fled his homeland during the 1956 Soviet invasion added in an interview Friday:

"Some of the Democratic organizations are taken over by the New Left and pushing all the ethnics from the Democratic ranks. We love America and feel the Nixon administration represents our point of view better."

Just how big a prize is at stake come election time depends on who does the calculating. Richard Scammon and Ben Wattenberg, in their 1970 book "The Real Majority," said first-and second-generation Americans constitute 15 per cent of the U.S. population—about 30 million.

A GOP committee official said the party figures 80 million Americans consider themselves ethnics and 30 million to 40 million of them are of voting age.

Stalin's Daughter Gives Birth

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Svetlana Peters, the daughter of late Russian premier Josef Stalin, gave birth early today to a healthy seven-pound nine-ounce girl whom she and her husband named Olga.

Mrs.Peters is the wife of William Wesley Peters, chief architect of the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation of Scottsdale, Ariz., and Spring Green, Wis.

A family spokesman said mother and daughter are doing well.

Mrs. Peters, 45, arrived at Marin General Hospital with her husband at 11 p.m. Thursday to await the birth. The baby arrived at 2:30 a.m. Mrs. Peters issued this statement from her hospital bed:

"I'm very happy to have a healthy and pretty child. This pretty girl makes another strong link between this country and myself."

Mrs. Peters, who has two grown children by a previous marriage in the Soviet Union, and her husband, reside in Scottsdale, Ariz. They have been staying with Peters' sister, Margedant Hayakawa and her husband, S.I. Hayakawa, president of San Francisco State College.

Operation of Johnson Library to Cost 4 Times the Estimate

By GAYLORD SHAW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Lyndon Baines Johnson Library, which dwarfs in concept and size all other presidential libraries, will cost the federal government four times more to operate than the figure given to the Congress that authorized the project.

Budget records and interviews with federal officials disclosed the quadrupled annual costs as President Nixon, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and hundreds of veterans from Johnson's Great Society prepared to head for Saturday's dedication of the library on the University of Texas campus.

At that time, the General Services Administration will formally take over the library's operation, maintenance and protection, adding these expenses to the National Archives' budget for collating the 31 million documents and other materials—including 500,000 still photographs—left from Johnson's six years as president.

The government's total annual operating cost for the library will exceed $850,000, records and interviews disclosed, compared with an estimate of $190,000 given to Congress in 1965 when it passed authorizing legislation.

The eight-story library is part of a campus complex constructed by the University of Texas under a single contract for a total cost of $18.6 million.

Archives officials said no federal funds were used in the library's construction. However, university officials said the school's share was $15.8 million with the rest coming from the federal treasury; a $2.6 million grant plus $270,000 in GSA funds.

Records show the Office of Education awarded the $2.6 million grant a year before Johnson left office to help the university construct what was then described as the "East Campus Library and Research Building."

Office of Education officials say the grant was for a three-story building adjacent to the presidential library. This building, known formally as Sid Richardson Hall, houses the Lyndon Baines Johnson School of Public Affairs.

Because a single construction contract was let for both the library and Richardson Hall, university officials said there is no way of separating costs for each building. However, an Office of Education spokesman said the $2.6 million grant "was not made for the archives. It was to be used for academic purposes only."

"No politics were involved," the official insisted. "Just because he was in the White House didn't make a bit of difference."

Records show the National Archives fiscal 1971 allocation of $670,000 for the Johnson Library was more than double what it spent on any of the other libraries, and far outstripped original estimates.

Funeral Cost of SST Is Criticized

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Giving up its fight to bring the American supersonic transport-plane back to life, the House has thrown a closing punch over how much to pay for the funeral.

It rejected the Senate's $155.8-million SST termination payment Thursday night 157 to 116 and approved $97.3 million instead.

Senators who had been waiting around to take Congress' final vote on ending the SST development program immediately quit and went home.

They could take that final action today only by accepting the $97.3-million figure because the House quit for the weekend and won't even talk about a compromise before Monday.

But although the House has not formally concurred in the Senate's 58-37 Wednesday night death blow to the SST, House leaders concede the fight is over and lost.

"The Senate's action makes perfectly clear," said House Appropriations Chairman George H. Mahon, D-Tex., "that the SST, at the present time, is dead and cannot be revived."

The Senate's $155.8 million included repayment of $58.5 million risked by U.S. airlines. Senators called repayment a moral obligation even if not a legal one spelled out in contracts.

But the House's $97.3 million included only $12 million federal SST shutdown costs and $85.3 million repayments required by the contracts: $52.1 million to the Boeing Co. which was building two SST prototypes and $33.2 million to General Electric which was building the engines.

In fact the House last week accepted only the $85.3 million—and then in a brief resurrection turned that burial fund into SST revival money by a vote of 201 to 197.

But the Senate stopped the House drive cold Wednesday night with its third anti-SST vote in a row, and the most decisive one yet.

The White House gave up the SST revival effort even before Wednesday's Senate vote and the House gave in Thursday, largely on the basis of Boeing Board Chairman William H. Allen's estimate that restarting the program would cost an extra $500 million to $1 billion.

This would have been on top of the original $1.7-billion cost estimate—$1.3 billion federal money and $400 million in [illegible] for building the

Mass Making of Houses Is Forecast

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — Housing Secretary George Romney says the advent of mass-produced, modular housing will bring as much progress to the homebuilding industry "in the next 10 years as we have seen in the past 10 centuries."

Moments after Romney spoke Wednesday, the first modular unit built under the government's Operation Breakthrough rolled out. The parts headed toward Kalamazoo to be assembled today.

They were built at the Levitt Building Systems,Inc., plant dedicated Wednesday.

"The Housing industry today is in the same position as was the automobile industry in 1912," said Romney, former head of American Motors Corp. He predicted that within 10 years 75 per cent of the nation's housing would be produced on assembly lines.

Modular housing consists of separate, easily transportable units produced at a factory and assembled at the construction site.

Levitt plans to build 600 modular houses this year. Company President Charles L. Riederman told Romney that by 1973, he expected 2,000 units to be produced on a single shift. He said the company intended to build seven such plants over the next 10 years throughout the country.

Levitt is one of 22 companies which won awards for design and development of housing systems in competition sponsored by Operation Breakthrough, which Romney initiated in 1969. They are expected to join Levitt in the near future in competing for the modular housing market.

Of the 600 units to be produced at the Levitt plant this year, 400 are to be assembled at a site north of Detroit, 93 in Kalamazoo and 29 in Seattle.

79 Nations Agree On Satellite

By LEWIS GULICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Countries participating in Intelsat have agreed unanimously on a new, permanent arrangement for international communications via satellite.

President Nixon hailed the outcome Friday as the 79-nation Intelsat conference wound up arduous negotiations begun 27 months ago.

"For 79 nations to agree on anything is a major accomplishment," Nixon told the group.

"It is indeed an historic and unique accomplishment and an indication of what can happen in the future where these exciting technological breakthroughs are occurring," he said.

Intelsat is the International Telecommunications Satellite Consortium, a unique public utility born under U.S. parentage in 1964 with the development of earth satellites capable of beaming communications signals around the world.

Its member nations jointly own the satellites. Ground stations and the telephone calls, television and other signals fed into them are handled in each country with its own communications system.

Under the temporary 1964 agreement, the United States was in the driver's seat. The U.S. Communications Satellite Corp. Comsat had more than 50 per cent of the voting power on Intelsat's board and served as technical operator of the system.

Under the new agreement, U.S. voting power in Intelsat will drop to 40 per cent or less and Comsat stands to be replaced as manager within about seven years.

The complicated agreement was hammered out in what proved to be both the largest and the longest international conference ever held in Washington.

In the compromises, the United States yielded its prime position but succeeded with others in maintaining the principle of business rather than political rule of Intelsat.

The lowered U.S. voting power reflects actual U.S. use and investment in the system. A parent Intelsat assembly created under the new agreement is to have one vote per country, but only advisory power.

Orders More Blacks Hired by State

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Gov. Dale Bumpers has sent letters to state department heads instructing them to begin hiring more blacks.

The letters went to the directors of the 13 major departments created under the governmental reorganization. Letters also were sent to J. Merle Lemley, administrator of the state Merit System Council, and Robert Whitfield, director of the state Office of Economic Opportunity.

Each department is to designate an administrator to be responsible for implementing the order. The program is to be coordinated through the governor's office.

Bumpers also sent letters to the directors of the state Game and Fsih Commission and the state Highway Department. Those agencies are independent of the governor's control.

Under the plan the administrators will maintain a file on all minority applicants with the qualifications to fill any position on the department's staff. He also would establish a relationship with agencies concerned with referring minority job applicants and request that blacks be referred to state [illegible] ment

POPULATION PROGRAMS

Excited children in mountain village in Nepal welcome A.I.D. advisor and family planning expert Dr. Ralph Ten Have as he arrives by helicopter.

Population pressures threaten the health and welfare of millions of individuals. In Pakistan A.I.D. assists government-run family planning programs.

There's a growing world awareness that the present "population explosion" is destructive to the well-being of millions of individual families, as well as threatening to the peace and prosperity of the whole world community. President Nixon gave the issue special attention in 1969 when he sent to the Congress a Presidential Message on the population problem—the first in U.S. history. He called it "a world problem which no country can ignore."

The U.S. Agency for International Development (A.I.D.) gives first priority to assistance to population and family planning programs—along with aid to food production—as essential elements in economic and social development. And it has primary responsibility for U.S. aid to such programs in the developing countries. During each of the past four years, Congress has earmarked increased funds within the Foreign Assistance budget for this part of A.I.D.'s work—$100 million was earmarked for fiscal year 1971, with regular A.I.D. programs proposed for 44 countries. The pictures on this page show some of the areas in which this campaign to deal with the world's population problem is being advanced.

Bank Records May Link Reds to Anti-War

By CARL C. CRAFT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Internal Security Committee reached today for banking records its chairman hints will illustrate influence exercised by those he calls highly placed Communists in antiwar acitivity.

Rep. Richard H. Ichord, D-Mo., arranged for disclosure of subpoenaed financial information during the third day of the panel's examination of two organizations sponsoring demonstrations here April 24 to May 6.

Without disclosing names, Ichord directed the committee's staff Tuesday to notify two members of the Socialist Workers Party and its youth arm, the Young Socialist Alliance, that they are mentioned in the bank data.

According to committee practice, those whose names are made public by the panel are given an invitation to reply to remarks made about them at hearings.

Meanwhile, Lawrence Cott of New York City, editor of the "Combat Newsletter," a publication he said "tries to report on the revolutionary movement today," told the committee the Socialist Workers Party is a subversive organization with significant membership in the National Peace Action Coalition.

He said the party is composed of followers of the doctrines of Leon Trotsky, the Soviet revolutionary expelled from Russia by Josef Stalin and later assassinated in Mexico.

Abandon Climb at Mt. Everest

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — The international expedition on Mt. Everest today abandoned its attempt to climb the unconquered southwest face of the world's highest mountain after a three-month effort plagued by dissension and illness.

A message from the expedition said British climbers Don Whillans, 37, and Dougal Haston, 29, had failed to reach the 29,028-foot summit, and the try was called off.

Another message said the abandonment was due to "lack of supplies of oxygen, food and rope" because two Nepalese Sherpas had been unable to get up to the two lead climbers.

Two Japanese climbers were backing up the Britons, while two Americans—John Evans, 32, of Houston, Tex., and Dr. David J. Peterson, 28, of Minneapolis, Minn.—were below them.

The climbers conceded failure eight days before the 18th anniversary of the first conquest of Everest, by Sir Edmund Hilliary of New Zealand and the Nepalese Sherpa Tenzing Norgay. The leader of their British expedition, Lord Hunt, on Thursday criticized the latest expedition as misconceived, unrealistic, unnecessary and largely a publicity stunt.

Failure came after the two Britons were within only 2,000 feet of the top.

The men had established the expedition's sixth and final camp Monday at 27,000 feet and had hoped to reach the summit by today.

Although Everest has been conquered five times, the successful expeditions all reached the summit via the less difficult South Col and the 1963 American expedition made a simultaneous conquest from the west ridge.

Although they failed to reach the summit, Whillans and Haston set a record for the southwest face. It was previously held by a Japanese expedition that reached 26,404 feet in 1970 and then gave up and switched instead to South Col.

The expedition was sponsored by the SundayTimes of London and the British Broadcasting Corp. A BBC television crew accompanied the expedition and hoped to place a camera atop the mountain to film the conquest.

The expedition left Katmandu Feb. 28 with 32 climbers from 13 nations but was plagued by misfortune and dissension.

Maj. H.V. Bahuguna of the Indian Army died April 18 of frostbite, exposure and exhaustion at 23,616 feet. A close friend, Toni Hiebler of West Germany, was so distressed by his death he quit the climb.

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bottel

LEECH IS EXPENSIVE PET

Dear Helen:

Would you believe: This boy lets his girl pay for everything—shows, dinners, entertainment, even his clothes. He is working, she isn't. They are both in college, she on an allowance from home.

She is terribly possessive; he takes it (among other things). She is also cute and talented, so why must she feel it necessary to "own" a guy unworthy of her?—CONCERNED PAL

Dear Pal:

There's no accounting for some people's "buying habits," but possessiveness I can understand: What you pay for, you expect to "own."

The girl might wake up sooner if her parents would cut the heart out of her allowance (meaning the gigolo fund).—H.

Dear Helen:

I'm sitting here crying. You see, I'm part Puerto Rican, and also have a little Polish blood. And I'm sick of being called "spic" and listening to those sick Polish jokes, or being called a "dumb Polack" (by people who aren't my friends).

I know you can't do much, but please print this to show those idiots they aren't funny.—PROUD AND HURT

Dear P and H:

Dear Helen:

I'm inspired to write this because of all the columns I've read about kids of their parents, running away, even committing suicide. I can thank MY family for not making me one of those kids.

I have a younger brother and two fantastic parents, and we all love each other very much. Of course, there are arguments—quite a few, come to think of it—and some seem to be the worst in the world. We've also had our share of problems but the thing that stands out in my mind is that we never really hold grudges. Within an hour, we're friends again.

Friends: That's a word everyone uses for someone his own age. Yet my mother is my best friend—the best a girl could have. Ever since I can remember (I'm 18) we've been having serious discussions. Not just on what outfit to wear, but on important things that touch my generation: boys, drugs, sex, life in general. She never puts me down or is too busy. She talks to me like an adult and an equal, and I'm not afraid to discuss anything with her.

My relationship with my parents and brother must be very rare. We aren't afraid to show love and pride in each other. And Im so thankful!—JANINE

Opening lead—♦ 5

By Oswald & James Jacoby

There is a classic bit of advice which goes, "Treat 'em rough and tell 'em nothing." We don't subscribe to it for handling the weaker sex, but we do believe that it should apply to your bridge opponents.

South has two good five-card suits and a fine hand. He opens properly with one spade and has every intention of showing his second suit.

Then North raises him to two spades and if South is smart he will forget all about that second suit and just bid four spades. The reason for this is that he has found his home the moment spades are raised and should see no reason to give any information about his hand to his opponents.

After the one-two-four bidding West has to find a lead. He doesn't have any good lead and when we saw the hand played, West selected his fourth best diamond. This lead was right up South's alley since he was able to win the trick with the nine, draw trumps with three leads, cash his ace of diamonds, lead the queen of diamonds for a ruffing finesse and make an extra trick at his game contract.

Had South shown his diamonds it is a cinch that a diamond would not have been opened. South would still have made his game provided he played the hand carefully, but he would have scored thirty points less in rubber bridge and a lot of match points less in a duplicate game.

Cranberry Meringue Pound Cake

By AILEEN CLAIRE
NEA Food Editor

A special occasion such as a bridal shower calls for an unusual but easy-to-prepare dessert. A very special cranberry meringue pound cake fits the bill and also is a good time for the bride to add to her recipe file.

CRANBERRY MERINGUE POUND CAKE

- 1 package (12 ounces) frozen pound cake, thawed
- 1 can (16 ounces) whole berry cranberry sauce
- Grated rind of 1 orange
- Juice of 1 orange
- ¾ cup white wine or orange juice
- 3 egg whites
- ½ cup sugar

Cut pound cake into 4 lengthwise slices. Mix cranberry sauce and orange rind. Mix orange juice and white wine and pour into a shallow oblong pan. Dip a cake slice into wine mixture, turning to coat both sides. Place slice on a heatproof platter. Spread with some of the cranberry sauce. Repeat dipping, stacking and spreading, using all slices and half of cranberry mixture, ending with a plain slice on top (remaking cake in loaf form). Beat egg whites until stiff. Gradually beat in sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, until mixture is stiff. Spread meringue over cake. Heat in 350-degree oven for 10 minutes. Garnish with wedges of orange. Top with remaining cranberry sauce and serve.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Doctor Follows His Own Advice

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — You stated in your column that it is best to avoid eating too much saturated fat and that the diet should contain mostly fish, chicken, turkey, vegetables, skim milk or low-fat fortified milk, polyunsaturated margarine and limited amounts of lean beef. More recently, in a column on gout, you said it was wise to limit the amount of fish, fowl and meat in the diet and get more of the protein from skim milk, egg whites, and low calorie (low-fat) cottage cheese, vegetables and cereals. This seems to be a contradiction of what is best. Is it best to eat or eliminate from the diet fish, chicken and turkey? Also, do you personally limit your intake of cholesterol and saturated fats? Do you ever eat egg yolks, pork or food made with saturated fats?

Dear Reader — You are combining answers to two different medical problems. The most common disease problem that our civilization has is heart and vascular disease caused by fatty deposits in the arteries to the heart, brain and elsewhere in the body. To prevent this problem most heart specialists feel you should limit the amount of fat and cholesterol in the diet. It is recommended that people use skim milk and nonfat dry milk powder, fish, fryer chicken (without the skin is better) and young turkey, with a greater abundance in the diet of vegetables, fruit and cereal. Whole milk, butter, margarines made from saturated fats, or hardened margarines, cheese (other than uncreamed cottage cheese) excessively fat meat of any type, such as bacon, and cholesterol-laden foods, such as egg yolks and organ meats like brain, should be used sparingly.

Now the person with gout has trouble metabolizing animal protein. It is not just a question of his fat intake. For this reason certain types of protein also have to be limited in the diet. This is why it is probably better for patients with gout to limit the amount of fish and chicken they eat.

The use of skim milk, egg whites and uncreamed cottage cheese, vegetables, cereals and fruit is recommended.

Even with a strict diet, many gout patients still have too much uric acid (the end product of certain proteins) in the blood. These people need medicine to control their gout problem.

Yes, I certainly do limit my cholesterol intake. Sometimes three or four months pass without my eating an egg yolk, even in food preparation. I almost never eat pork and make it a point to eat low fat foods. I am 5-10 and my weight varies from 135 to 140 pounds. Most of my fellow physicians consider me lean. The fat ones think I am emaciated.

FASHION

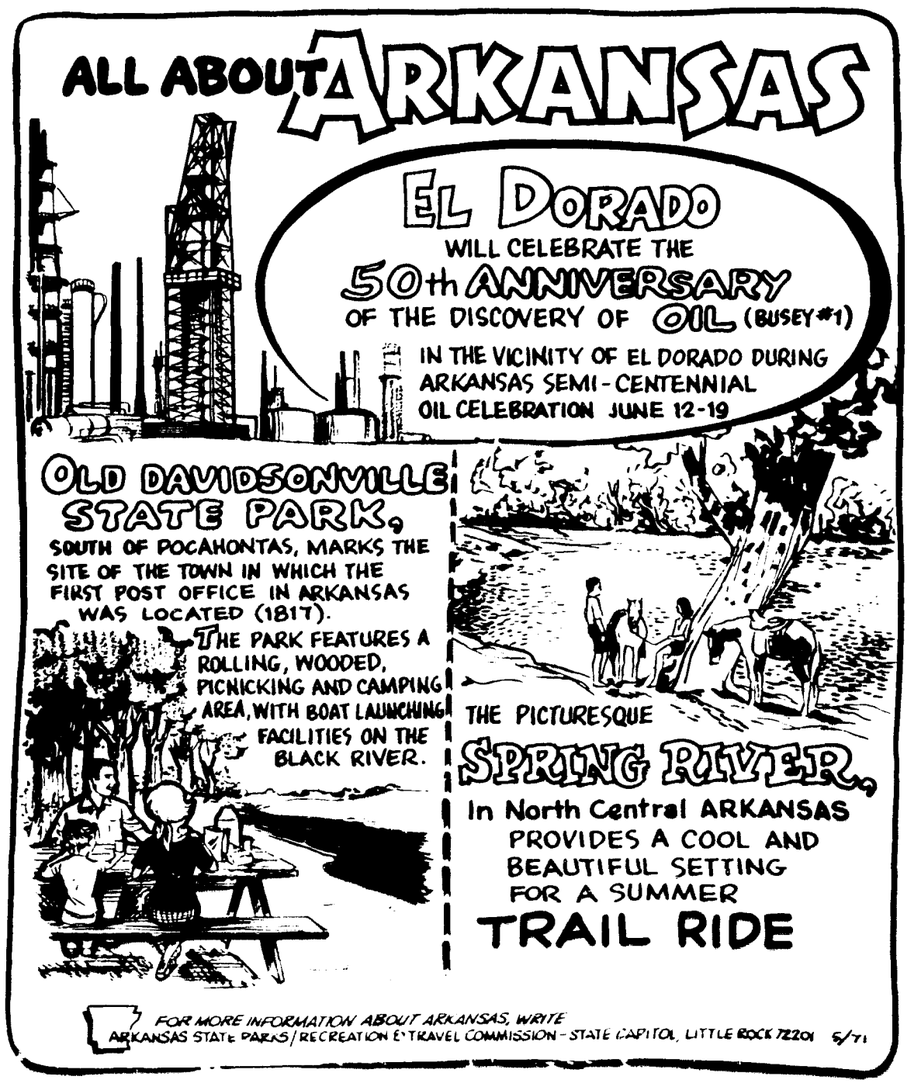

By HELEN HENNESSY
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK -- (NEA) — Slippers have long been fashion's stepchild when it comes to packing a travel wardrobe. Different clothes call for different shoes, particularly with the continued emphasis on the leg. Yet footwear adds weight and bulk in tightly stuffed suitcases. And so women often leave their slippers at home and settle for going barefoot, a decision they quickly regret as they pad around unfamiliar hotel rooms.

Cuddle Pups, a new breed of slippers that double as casual footwear and are completely washable, are a unique way to sidestep this dilemma. Designed with cushion-soft, foam insoles to give the comfort of old-fashioned bedroom slippers, there's nothing fuddy duddy about their lightweight, up-to-the-minute styling in the latest lounge and sportswear looks.

A double-banded sandal in white or natural with contrast stitching and a tricot-lined espadrille in red, white or blue designed with cork soles become the perfect accessory for swimwear, playsuits and the short shorts that will be seen around every pool and beach this summer.

For the "rich peasant" fashions or prairie girl styles that will abound in the months ahead there's a ruffled scuff in a red hearts 'n' flowers design and a dainty, pastel floral-striped mule.

If He Feels Good, Canonero Rolls in Stall

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The big bay colt walked into stall 14 at Belmont Park and promptly got down to roll in the wood shavings on the floor.

"He does that when he feels good," said Groom Pedro Quintero of Canonero II, who arrived at Belmont Thursday for his shot at thoroughbred racing's fabled and elusive Triple Crown.

The shot for Canonero, which means gunner in Spanish, will come June 5 with the running of the Belmont Stakes.

The arrival here of Canonero II, come-from-behind winner of the Kentucky Derby and the front running winner of the Preakness, caused quite a bit of activity around barn 7A, where stall 14 has a yellow sign with brown lettering and a brown numeral, Canonero II, 9.

The No. 9 on the sign was the numeral worn in the Preakness by Canonero II, owned by Edgar Caibett of Venezuela, and raced mostly in that country. The sign is a souvenier from the Preakness.

It is doubtful there will be a No. 9 in the Belmont, as only five or six 2-year-olds are expected to oppose Canonero II.

Canonero II arrived at Balmont from Pimlico in a van which also held Quintero, and two Spanish-speaking uniformed guards.

Movie cameras whirred still cameras clicked and newsmen bombarded an interpreter provided by the New York Racing Association as the colt was walked under the shed row.

"He's earned it (the attention)," said Jockey Gustavo Avila, on hand for Canonero II's arrival. It was a complete contrast to his arrival in Kentucky for the Derby when he received as little acclaiim as an ordinaryallowance horse. Even the trip to the Preakness has been greeted with as much doubt as excitement.

Canonero II, the $1,200 Kentucky—yearling purchase, who now carries a multimillion dollar value, appeared fit for his Triple Crown bid.

The five previous candidates whose bids have failed since Citation in 1948 are Tim Tam, 1958; Carry Back, 1962; Northern Dancer, 1964; Kauai King, 1966; and Majestic Prince, 1969.

ABA Debate Cooled by Arms Parley

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Armed Services Committee chairman says the annual debate over the Safeguard antiballistic missile may be cooled this year because of its importance in the U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms talks.

Citing President Nixon's announcement Thursdaythat the Soviets have agreed to consider limits on both offensive and defensive missiles, Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., said:

"This makes it crystal clear that the ABM is one of our most important cards in the SALT (strategic arms limitation) talks.

"I'm always ready to talk peace but while I'm talking peace I'm going to keep my powder dry."

Hebert's committee refused to halt Safeguard construction Thursday, putting $627.7 million for it in a $21.88 billion military hardware bill tentatively scheduled for House action the third week in June.

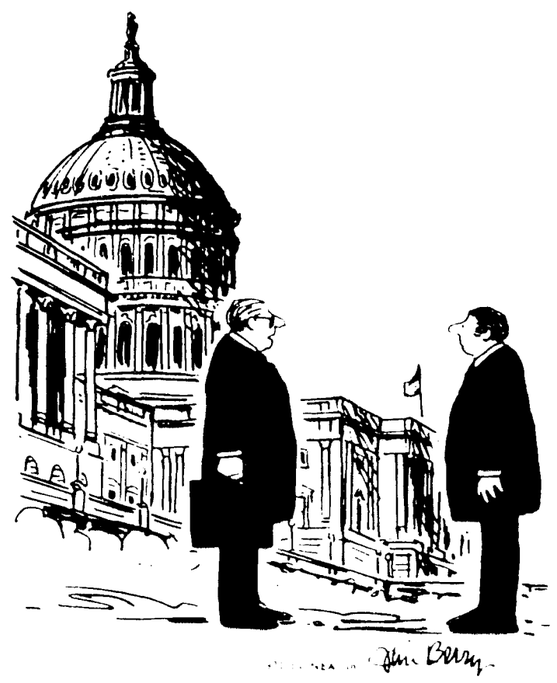

It rejected by a vote of 33 to 6 an effort to cut off all military hardware for the Southeast Asia war after Jan. 1 unless Nixon says this would jeopardize American prisoners of war and troop withdrawals. The committee said it approved all except $18.6 million of the President's requests.

Among them are $357.2 million for the C5 supercargo plane and $373.3 million for the B1 bomber planned for the late 1970s.

Reversing two earlier votes,the committee voted to keep the Cheyenne helicopter alive but approved no money before the Army finishes a study of the cost-inflated project, and approved $27.5 million for more research and development on the Army's Main Battle Tank 70. The Army originally had asked for $86.6 million in tank funds.

Reps. Lucien N. Nedzi, D-Mich., and Charles W. Whalen Jr., R-Ohio, said they would take their end-the-war amendmen' to the House floor.

Stargell Homers for Victory

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

John O'Donoghue came out of the Montreal bullpen throwing strikes ... and more strikes ... to Willie Stargell.

He should have quit while he was ahead.

Stargell, batting against O'Donoghue with two on in the 13th inning Friday night, fouled off eight consecutive pitches, then struck back with his 14th home run of the season, sending the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-2 victory over the Expos.

The victory, fifth for the Pirates in their lst six games, kept them one jump ahead of the New York Mets and St. Louis Cardinals in the National League East.

The Mets trimmed Atlanta 6-2 behind fireballer Nolan Ryan and the Cardinals bounced back from an 8-3 deficit to bomb San Diego 15-8.

Houston ambushed San Francisco 4-1; Cincinnati topped Philadelphia 7-3 and Los Angeles swamped the Chicago Cubs 8-1 in other NL games.

In American League play, Boston downed Baltimore 8-4 in 10 innings; Detroit nipped Washington 1-0; Cleveland outscored the New York Yankees 8-7; Minnesota trampled Oakland 10-1 and the Chicago White Sox beat California 3-0. Milwaukee and Kansas City were rained out with the Brewers leading 4-1 in the fifth inning.

Stargell, who had been out of the starting lineup since last Saturday with an injured right hand, singled in the seventh inning before Bob Robertson's home run gave Pittsburgh a 2-1 lead.

But the Expos tied it in the ninth on Boots Day's run-scoring single. The deadlock stood until the 13th; when Vic Davalillo and Roberto Clemente stroked one-out singles off Howie Reed. O'Donoghue, a left-hander, then was brought in to face the left hand-hitting Stargell.

Their duel ended with Stargell pounding an 0-2 pitch over the center field fence for a 5-2 Pittsburgh lead.

For Stargell, who set an all-time record with 11 homers in April, the swat was hit first since May 7, when he connected at Los Angeles. He had sat out six of the Pirates' previous 11 games and appeared only as a pinch-hitter in another.

Despite the layoff, the brawny outfielder leads the majors with 36 runs batted in, shares the home run lead with Atlanta slugger Hank Aaron and has a .330 batting average—10th highest in the NL.

Aaron drilled his 14th homer and two singles, but the Braves managed only on other hit off fireballer Nolan Ryan, who ended a five-game Met tailspin despite a typical streak of wildness.

Ryan, 5-1, struck out seven batters, but walked five, hit three and threw two wild pitches before departing with two outs and the bases loaded in the ninth. Danny Frisella retired Orlando Cepeda on a tap to the mound for the final out, saving Ryan's first career victory over Atlanta.

Ken Boswell socked a two-run triple and Jerry Grote delivered two more runs with a single for the Mets.

Jose Cardenal, Joe Torre and Matty Alou divided nine of St. Louis' 15 hits, Cardenal and Torre each smacking a three-run homer and Alou tagging two run-producing doubles, as the Cardinals roared from behind against San Diego.

Julian Javier hit a bases-empty homer and Lou Brock also poked three hits for the Cards, extending his hitting streak to 17 games. Clarence Gaston had a homer and four RBI for the Padres, who collected 13 hits but committed five of the game's nine errors.

Slender Dave Concepcion cracked his first home run and first double of the season, good for three RBI, and sent another rival home with a sacrifice fly to lead the Reds past Philadelphia.

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — Little Rock Catholic beat Texarkana, the only team that had beaten them this year, to win the state high school baseball championship here Friday night, 11-0.

Catholic's record for the season was 16-2, with a doubleheader loss to Texarkana in April. Texarkana's record is 19-7.

Pat Campbell of Catholic scored a two-run home run in the third inning.

Campbell was named the state's best all-around high school baseball player.

He also was named to the state's All-State High School Baseball team at right field.

Also named on the team were Garry Pitts of Mountain Home, first base; Ron Taylor of Bay, second base; Matt Morrison of Little Rock Catholic, third base; David Whatley of Texarkana, short stop; Jim Doolittle of Little Rock Catholic, center field; Richard Wilson of Junction City, left field; Larry Taylor of Bay and Denny Cowling of Texarkana, both pitchers; and David Flenough of Marvell and Bo Castelberry of Nashville, both catchers.

White Sox Beaten By Bradley

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Tom Bradley is studying secondary education at the University of Maryland and first-class baseball courtesy of Profs. Juan Pizaroo, Jim Coates and Dennis Bennett.

The 23-year-old right-hander turned on his former California teammates Friday night with a five-hit shutout and pitched the Chicago White Sox to a 3-0 victory.

Bradley spent the first two years of his professional career in the Angels' organization, including a goodly portion of 1970 at Hawaii, where he came under the Pizaroo-Coates-Bennett tutoring triumvirate.

"I've learned something from all three," Bradley said of the ex-major league hurlers. "Pizarro taught me composure on the mound and how to avoid getting upset when the going gets rough. Coates taught me an aggressive mental outlook—now to get up mentally for a game. And Bennett helped me on opposing batters, how to pitch to them and get them out."

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston downed Baltimore 8-4 in 10 innings, Minnesota walloped Oakland 10-1, Detroit nipped Washington 1-0 and Cleveland edged the New York Yankees 8-7. Milwaukee was rained out at Kansas City with the Brewers leading 4-1 in the fifth inning.

National League scores: Houston 4, San Francisco 1; Pittsburgh 6, Montreal 2 in 13 innings; New York Mets 6, Atlanta 2; St. Louis 15, San Diego 8; Los Angeles 8, Chicago Cubs 1 and Cincinnati 7, Philadelphia 3.

It was old home week at Anaheim Stadium and a crew of ex-Angels came back to haunt the Californians. Besides Bradley's strong pitching, Tom Egan cracked a home run, Rick Reichardt rapped two singles and Church Tanner, who skippered Hawaii last season, managed it all. Bill Melton, who never played for the Angels but who lives in California, belted a two-run homer for Chicago's first tallies.

It was the third shutout of the season for Bradley, 5-2, and lowered his earned run average to 1.27.

The Red Sox blew a two-run lead in the ninth but erupted for four in the 10th to beat Baltimore and take a four-game lead over the defending world champion Orioles in the AL East.

Two homers by Duane Josephson and one each by Carl Yastrzemski and Billy Conigliaro gave the Red Sox a 4-2 lead and Jim Lonborg, just back from the minors, was one out away from his first complete game in almost two years.

But with two out in the ninth, Brooks Robinson, who homered for Baltimore's first two runs, singled and scored on Dave Johnson's double. Two walks and a wild pitch tied the score.

OPENING DAY is still more than a year away, but the setting for the 1972 Olympic games is rapidly taking shape in Munich, West Germany. Main stadium, under way above, will be on the lines of a circus "Big Top," with soaring pillars supporting steel cables, right. In the background is an already completed landmark of the 1972 games—the "Olympic Tower."

Bob Gibson Overcomes the Plotters

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Baseball pitchers are notoriously quirky creatures, always suspicious that there is some kind of plot brewing against them, always sleeping with one eye open. Bob Gibson of the St. Louis Cardinals, perhaps the best pitcher in the game, is as twitchy as the rest of his coevals who, someone once said, "all think left-handed."

Gibson, now 35 years old, has won 20 games or more for five of the last six years and last season was named the Cy Young Award winner in the National League for the second time in three years. Yet even he is justifiably paranoid about the trend which, pitchers feel, may eliminate them from the game.

"It's been a gradual thing," said Gibson, who lay prone on a rubbing table in the pitchers' favorite gathering spa, the trainer's room. "I know that in the last couple years they've put something in the ball to make it livelier.

"I proved it myself. I hit a home run in San Diego that ended up someplace in the upper deck. I hit it like McCovey. I can't hit a ball that well. Under normal circumstances I'd have to hit a ball, then chase it and hit it again to get it that far."

Then there is the matter of Astroturf, which scurries the progress of balls hit through the infield. And the lowered mound also caused some havoc with Gibson. "When I used to put mustard on a ball, it would whoosh past a hitter's knees. But when the mound was lowered I had less leverage and I was getting the ball up around the shoulders. It took some adjusting to."

And the strike zone, said Gibson, is in a nutshell. Period.

"Umpires don't call the corners any more," he said. "But the other night I had two strikes and no balls on Bud Harrelson and I threw one—whooosh. It cut the corner. The umpire said 'Strike Three.' I almost collapsed."

Gibson hopped down from the table and graphically demonstrated what has happened to the vertical strike zone. "Once it was from the knees to the letters," he said. "Now it's from here to here." He pointed to the top of his kneecap and then to his belly button.

Joe Torre, a Cardinal teammate, came in and backed up Gibson on this point. "I noticed it shrinking when I was catching two years ago," said Torre.

Torre placed some of the blame on Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. "Kuhn is a fan," said Torre. "He wants to see runs. He feels it creates greater fan interest."

Gibson nodded. "You know, the other night, for the first time since I first came up to the big leagues, I got a little nervous on the mound. I had the bases loaded and Tom Seaver was up with a 3-2 count and I wasn't sure whether I could get the next strike over. My ball was really sailing and I was throwing for the middle of the plate and it was going toward the corner." He struck Seaver out, though.

Gibson, who usually works as rapidly as a jackhammer, said the last time he remembered questioning himself on the mound was in one of his first games in the major leagues, in 1959. He was called in to pitch to Willie Mays with the bases loaded. Solly Hemus, the Cardinals' manager, gave the ball to Gibson and said, "Strike him out." And left. "Strike Mays out!" recalls Gibson. "I could hardly stand up, my knees were wobbling so bad." Despite his nervous infirmity, Gibson struck Mays out on three pitches.

Gibson has obviously fought off plots against pitchers and encroaching middle age with successful ferocity. Even though his left knee swells whenever it has a mind to nowadays and he probably spends more time on the rubbing table to ease the pain in his joints than ever before, he still possesses a fast ball and baseball wit that terrorize batters.

But he senses the changing times, even at home. For example, his eldest daughter is 13 and is going through a new stage. Dolls are out. Last Christmas, she wanted shoulder pads and a helmet for a present. Gibson refused to buy them. "She's athletic, but she's still a girl," he said.

What did he finally buy her? he was asked.

"A football," he said softly.

Blind Golfer Charley Boswell Doesn't Have Any Handicap

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — A paramount problem in doing a one-hour television documentary on Charley Boswell, the blind golfer, was how to keep it from being soppily maudlin.

"When you start talking about Charley," said Bud Greenspan, writer, producer and director for "A Couple of Days in the Life of Charley Boswell," "you start using all those adjective phrases, and words like 'courage' and all that mush. So we decided not to use a narrator."

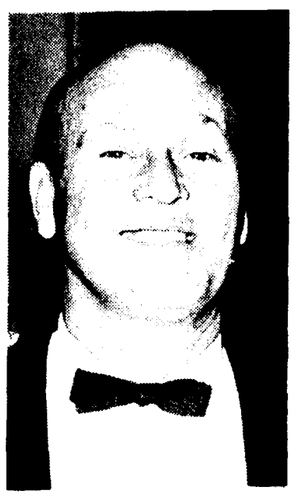

Boswell's vivid words and actions tell his story. He needs no help. Well, maybe a little. He plays with a friend, or "coach," who tells him his situation on the course and places the club head at the correct angle. Then the show belongs to Boswell and his grooved swing.

His story has inherent drama, and humor, and the hour builds to a fitting and natural climax in which Boswell approaches the 36th and final green of last year's National Blind Golfers' Tournament in Greensboro, N.C. He is the leader, by a small margin. Everyone else is in. It is 7:30 in the evening. It is raining and the heavens, playing the moment for all its melodramatic worth, rumble like a deep drum roll.

"It's so damn dark I can't even see the hole," complains Boswell's coach, Grant Thomas, unwittingly ironic. Boswell chips up and has a six-inch putt to go, and cans it, to win by one stroke his 17th Blind Golfers' Open, and his first in four years.

After it is over, Boswell is seen lying on a motel bed still in his rubber rain clothes. His full florid face, with patches of white hair tufted above the ears, looks dog-tired but content.

"Golf has been great to me," he says. "I don't know where I'd be without it. And I'll never lose my zest for winning. No, I wouldn't change a thing."

Charley Boswell
No need to be maudlin.

Boswell's life changed drastically in 1945 when he was 26 years old and infantry captain at the Battle of the Bulge, as he explained to a New York cab driver ("Are you really blind? Do you always get around alone like this?") in the film. He rescued two men from a burning tank, and as he returned for the third, the tank exploded. Boswell was critically wounded and permanently blinded.

While recuperating at Valley Forge Hospital, he was encouraged by a corporal to take up golf. Boswell had been a candidate for football All-American at the University of Alabama, and had also been signed by the New York Yankees just before being drafted by the Army in 1941. But he had never played golf. Within two years he was shooting regularly in the mid-80s.

Boswell, 55, owns his own insurance agency in Birmingham, Ala., and recently was named Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the State of Alabama. He is married and the father of two sons and a daughter.

But the film, which is expected to be seen on prime time television in September, deals mainly with golf. And surely Charley Boswell would have it no other way. Two of the most engaging vignettes involve rounds he played with Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus. In both instances, there are shots of Palmer and Boswell, and Nicklaus and Boswell, walking arm in arm down the fairway.

At a dinner at Palmer's house, one also gets a warm, interesting look at the relaxed Palmer, who tells anecdotes, calls his father "Pap," and listen closely and knowingly as Boswell talks about the "thrill of club hitting that ball," and "knowing when I hit it pretty good."

And with Nicklaus on the course. Nicklaus remarks that they are wearing the same color shirts, but he's not sure what the colors of their pants are. "That's because I'm color blind," says Nicklaus.

The film was seen at a screening in New York City. Boswell, after the show, stood in powder blue sport jacket and also wore jazzy red, white and blue shoes, and spoke effusively and confidently in a group.

"Just to meet him is kind of inspirational," said Nancy Pratt, one of the viewers. "He makes you think you can do impossible things, too."

"But one criticism I have of the film," said a friend, "is that it really didn't discuss any low points of his life his struggles, his frustrations and labors in learning the game."

"But that's easy to imagine," said Mrs. Pratt. "All you have to do is close your eyes."

DON'T CALL IT 'INDY'

By BOB COCHNAR

To begin with, don't ever call it "The Indy."

After all, if any motor race can be considered dignified (tradition does cloak an event in dignity) it is the Indianapolis 500. "Indy" smacks of the crass and the commonplace. Besides, the 500 is serious.

It is inextricably entwined with a kind of Midwestern machismo which makes even a mildly negative attitude toward the race somewhat dangerous, at least within a 200-mile radius of ground zero on race day.

Why this should be so, even after more than 50 years, is something for the philosophers to debate. In Indiana, May is 500 month. From May 15 on, middle America is infected with the spirit and on race day, even effete Easterners emerge from their cocoons and say to each other, knowingly, "Andretti is bound to do it again." (At any other time, those same Easterners will ask pretentiously, "Andretti who?")

This year, there is a slight departure from tradition. The Race will be run on May 29, the Saturday before Memorial Day. And another tradition, established last year, continues. Once again, there's a purse of more than $1 million—$1,003,610, to be precise.

There are 76 entries from which 33 will be chosen in qualifying rounds. The unselected either sit around nursing damaged egos or, more realistically, begin to wonder how they'll pay the staggering setting-up bills. There's not even a piece of the purse to hope for.

A. J. Foyt will be looking for a fourth victory, which would be unprecedented. He won in 1961, 1964 and 1967.

Once again, creative car owners have come up with screwball names for their machines, like "Sugaripe Prune Special," "Joe Hunt Magneto Special," "Indy on a Shoestring," "STP Keep Kool Radiator Treatment Special," "Minnesota Serendipity Special," and the best, "Need a Sponsor Special."

Five hundred miles, it should be remembered, is not a Sunday drive. And thrashing pell-mell around a squared-off oval is not necessarily fun. Forget about those who sniff that driving Indianapolis is easy, that all one does is stamp on it and turn left. There are some 2,000 of those turns and each one, believe it or not, is not the same.

Each driver must plan his race with extreme care, knowing that his plan may change seconds after he has formed it.

SHAVING STROKES

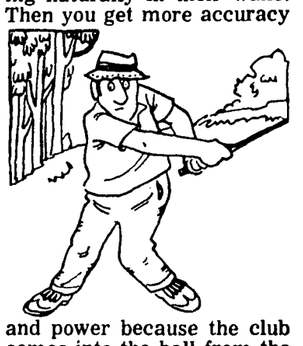

by Frank Bear

Most average golfers fail to start the downswing properly. Instead of uncoiling from the legs up, they tend to force the shot with their hands and arms.

The most common result is that they throw the clubhead outside the desired line of flight, cut across the ball, and slice the shot from left to right.

The feet and legs should lead the downswing, with the upper part of the body following naturally in their wake. Then you get more accuracy and power because the club comes into the ball from the inside-out and with greater speed.

I like to think of the downswing starting with the right foot. I push off the right foot, delaying the action of my hands and arms.

All good athletes use their legs this way. A baseball pitcher initiates his motion toward the plate by pushing off his right foot. Try to visualize how a good pitcher looks when he starts to release the ball, and you have a good mental image of how you ought to start the downswing.

Safe Boating Quiz

Q. According to the Rules of the Road, which boat has the right-of-way, A or B?

A. Neither. When boats are approaching head-on, both should give way by turning to the right and then resuming course so that they pass each other with ample clearance. Boat safety experts warn against playing "chicken" unless you want to wind up in the soup.
